The advice which flowed from this orthodoxy was the primary cause of the Soviet disaster. The decision not to follow it was the main reason for China's enormous success in its reform programme.

Asian governments including China and all the major powers in Asia give higher priority to relations with the United States than to relations with any power in Asia in addition to being Asia's economic partner of choice and acknowledged security guarantor the United States has a leadership position in Asia that rests on a determined U.S. administration prepared to confront adversaries and opponents; this position gives pause to Asian governments seeking to challenge or displace the United States the analysis in this monograph demonstrates that even hardline Chinese critics of U.S. hegemony in Asia and world affairs have been compelled in recent years to adopt a more constructive posture in dealings with the United States recognizing that China builds comprehensive national power over the coming decades Chinese leaders are often frustrated by U.S. policies and power and desirous over the long term to see their periphery free of constraining U.S. great power involvement however they show little sign of deviating from efforts to expand influence in selected ways that tend to avoid directly challenging the United States thus for the most part China's rise in Asia does not come at the expense of U.S. interests and is not a part of a zero-sum game resulting in the automatic decline of U.S. influence to enhance its position in Asia Washington should focus on repairing negative features of recent U.S. policy in Asia related to the fallout of its actions in Iraq the Middle East and Korea U.S. unilateralism in international politics and inattention to the concerns of Asian governments over economic development nation building and multilateral cooperation this recommendation requires adjustments not a wholesale revamping of U.S. policies backed by continued cautious management of U.S. security commitments and economic relations with regional governments they will enhance the leading role of the United States in Asian affairs the prevailing tendency of Asian governments to hedge in the post-cold war environment seems likely to continue to pose challenges for U.S. management of alliances and other relations with Asian governments seeking more independence and freedom of action inclining some to seek closer ties with China among other policymakers in the United States should not overreact to such maneuvers recognizing that such hedging continues to provide a prominent role for the United States as the region's well-recognized security stabilizer and economic partner of choice in particular Chinese government leaders found that their overt efforts in the late 1990s to compel Asian governments to choose between a rising China and the United States failed in the face of Asian governments' long unwillingness to do so the government should learn from this experience in seeking to advance its leadership in Asia without the overt competition with China that would try to force Asian governments to make such a choice probably with negative implications for U.S. leadership in Asia

India's Great Power Politics 2021-09-22 This book focuses on the market issues facing Asian industrialization and the possibility feasibility and sustainability of China integrating the Asian economies how China's rise affects Asian market and the economic relation between China and other Asian economies the book looks into this issue from market and regional perspectives and concludes that Asian industrialization including China makes the unified regional market as the common goal of Asian economies the integration of Asian markets is also a key strategy for China in the next 5-10 years China may become a major player or even a leader in integrating regional markets however it will be a long process depending on China's economic strength in the future

China's Rise 2013 American critics who deeply fear a China threat have unduly influenced government policy China hawks believe China can and should push the United States out of Asia and dominate the world protectionists argue that China threatens American jobs and prosperity this authoritative work examines why and how the U.S. should stabilize and improve its relations with China it first assesses the threat posed by China addressing such issues as military capability, Taiwan the trade deficit, human rights and democracy it then discusses the rationale for rapprochement between the two countries in order to achieve a stable peace it makes the case for a fundamental shift in U.S. policy and efforts by both countries to increase their cooperation it analyzes the benefits to the United States of this policy shift along with the potential impact on Japan, Taiwan and both Koreas this significant work on U.S. China relations will be an essential resource for the academic and policy community as well as of interest to the general reader on a topic of great public concern Bloomsbury Publishing

China's Rise and the Development of Asian Regional Integration 2014-03-05 With featuring far reaching diversities and disparities among the regional states in their political, economic and social systems and cultural and religious orientations East Asia is a microcosm of international society at large nevertheless there are unique dynamics unfolding in East Asia at the turn of the twenty-first century namely the rise of China as a contender for regional and global hegemony and a set of collective initiatives to integrate the region into a harmonious community this book provides new arguments on China's rise and the transformation of East Asia and analyzes the foreign policy behavior of the regional states and relations among them in doing so the contributors show why and how China is rising and how China's rise shapes the emerging regional structures and institutions in East Asia furthermore given the East Asian context where the world's second and third largest economies coexist with much smaller states and with China's ascendency likely to continue this book challenges the pervasive dichotomy of hegemony and community this allows for a fuller and more nuanced account of China's role and the shifting regional policies in East Asia in which hegemonic cooperation does not necessarily lead to a hegemonic form of regional order presenting strategic political economic and historical perspectives on China's changing role in the region and the development of regionalism China's rise and regional integration in East Asia will be of great interest to students and scholars of Chinese politics, Asian politics, international relations and regionalism

The China Fallacy 2020-03-08 China's emergence as a global actor has questioned the position of the United States as the strongest power and the future of the Washington led global order but achieving the status of a truly global player wielding influence in all dimensions of power would require China among other things to leverage its regional influence in Central Asia this region is increasingly representing China's western leg of economic expansion and development and is of a growing strategic importance for Beijing it is also a region that should be of greater strategic importance to Washington which seeks to preserve its leading position in the international system and ensure China's peaceful integration in the global political security and economic architecture the question of future economic and security order in Central Asia is thus of paramount importance to global stability China is already projecting the strongest economic presence in the region and has the potential to build comprehensive influence across economic cultural political military and security spheres just as in the Asia-Pacific it is the rise of China and its perceived efforts at domination in Central Asia that are driving the reconfiguration of the region's geopolitics and are challenging the U.S. global supremacy requiring Washington to advance creative economic and military solutions in the heart of Eurasia to stay relevant globally and regionally the United States has to pursue a robust direct and long term strategy of engagement in Central Asia as it seeks to do so Washington cannot premise its cooperation with other powers in Central Asia on the isolation of China a global force calling for engagement where beneficial and containment where necessary washington should boost military engagement in the region upgrade its new silk road strategy nsrs advance cooperation with key partners and shape china s global ascendance by leveraging its position in central asia it should consider joining multilateral institutions involving the regional countries and china or seek the creation of new ones to shape china s regional activities it should link its nsrs with china s belt strategy where it benefits the region s development while ensuring multidirectional contours of regional geo economic forces it should also start pondering how to leverage its potential strategic relationship with iran which links the middle east with central and south asia and shares growing economic ties with china finally it should develop platforms of cooperation with china in economic and security spheres pertaining to both global and regional affairs none of these tasks are easy to accomplish this policy monograph written in march 2015 sheds light on the crucial forces at work assesses the possibility and implications of china s hegemony in central asia and highlights the need for washington to play real politics at the table rather than from across the high seas
