Spurred by innovations in printing technology, the modern poster emerged in the 1890s as a popular form of visual culture in the United States. Created by some of the best-known illustrators and graphic designers of the period, including Will H. Bradley, Florence Lundborg, Edward Penfield, and Ethel Reed, these advertisements for books and high-tone periodicals such as Harper’s and Lippincott’s went beyond the realm of commercial art, incorporating bold stylized imagery and striking typography. This book, based on the renowned Leonard A. Lauder Collection, explores the craze for literary posters which became sought-after collectibles even in their day. It offers new scholarly perspectives that address the aesthetic sophistication and modernity of the literary poster the impact of early experiments in the field of advertising psychology the expanded opportunities for women artists who played an important role in advancing the so called poster style and the printmaking techniques that artists employed in this novel art form a lively survey of a little known but highly influential period in graphic design the art of the literary poster is sure to delight enthusiasts of illustration advertising and book arts for 3ds for the four volume set LNCs 14442-14445 constitutes the proceedings of the 19th IFIP TC 13 international conference on human computer interaction INTERACT 2023 held in York, UK in August-September 2023 the 71 full papers and 58 short papers included in this book were carefully reviewed and selected from 406 submissions they were organized in topical sections as follows 3D interaction accessibility accessibility and aging accessibility for auditory hearing disabilities co-design cybersecurity and trust data physicalisation and cross device eye-free gesture interaction and sign language haptic interaction and healthcare applications self-monitoring human robot interaction information visualization information visualization and 3D interaction interacting with children interaction with conversational agents methodologies for HCI model-based UI design and testing motion sickness stress and risk perception in 3D environments and multisensory interaction VR experiences natural language processing and AI explainability online collaboration and cooperative work recommendation systems and AI explainability social AI social and ubiquitous computing social media and digital learning understanding users and privacy issues user movement and 3D environments user self-report user studies user studies eye-tracking and physiological data virtual reality virtual reality and training courses industrial experiences interactive demonstrations keynotes panels posters and workshops for September 2016
Why did collectors seek out posters and collect ephemera during the late nineteenth and the twentieth centuries? How have such materials been integrated into institutional collections today? What inspired collectors to build significant holdings of works from cultures other than their own? What are the issues facing curators and collectors of digital ephemera today? These are among the questions tackled in this volume, the first to examine the practices of collecting prints, posters, and ephemera during the modern and contemporary periods. A wide range of case studies feature collections of printed materials from the United States, Latin America, France, Germany, Great Britain, China, Japan, Russia, Iran, and Cuba. Fourteen essays and one roundtable discussion, all specially commissioned from art historians, curators, and collectors, for this volume explore key issues such as the roles of class, politics, and gender and address historical contexts, social roles, value, and national and transnational aspects of collecting practices. The global scope highlights cross-cultural connections and contributes to a new understanding of the place of prints, posters, and ephemera within an increasingly international art world.

This study is the product of a long view of space exploration and the conversations about space in China it locates the multiple conversations about space exploration and utilisation as they are in the People's Republic of China (PRC) within other conversations about space culture in the world. China is viewed by Western researchers through many lenses which are examined here critically in previous studies. Writers explain away China's space programme with the easy answers of a space race and a China threat in which the space programme is seen as merely an example of global competition or threat. But this thesis challenges those barriers to Western understanding of the Chinese public conversation of space culture. In this study, critical theory and an underlying epistemology within a post-enlightenment cultural frame are applied to official archival and ephemeral texts and images. The manner of the critical application is distinguished from derivative techniques operationalised as open source intelligence. The concept of place and within that, Foucault's linguistic concept of heterotopia, is significant both in understanding the Chinese overseas space bases on Earth and the temporal and spatial dislocations experienced in space missions. In acknowledging the interpretative approach, an empirical study has been carried out which demonstrates that the key factor in the Chinese conversation is science within the context of modernisation tempered by Chinese cultural affirmation and international cooperation. The thesis concludes by providing general principles in future work for successful research into the popular culture of space exploration in the Pacific as elsewhere.

The Chinese Space Programme in the Public Conversation about Space in the Pacific as elsewhere, indigenous communities live with the consequences of environmental mismanagement and over-exploitation, but rarely benefit from the short-term economic profits such actions may generate within the global system. National and international policy frameworks ultimately rely on local community assent without effective local participation and partnership; these extremely imposed frameworks miss out on millennia of local observation and understanding and seldom deliver viable and sustained environmental cultural and economic benefits at the local level. This collection argues that environmental sustainability, indigenous political empowerment, and economic viability will succeed only by taking account of distinct local contexts and cultures. In this regard, these Pacific indigenous case studies offer islands of hope for all communities marginalised by increasingly intrusive and increasingly rapid technological changes and by global dietary, economic, political, and military forces with whom they have no direct contact or influence.
